

Place the following Cards  in the Red Envelope  for the Grand Reveal at the end of the tournament:

Suspect: Edith Eagle - Location: The Kitchen - Weapon: Wrench

Ladies and gentlemen, it is time to uncover the chilling truth behind the murder of the surveyor at the golf course. With your collective efforts and a meticulous investigation, we have unraveled the identity of the culprit, the location, and the weapon used in this harrowing incident.

The tale unfolds on a fateful Monday, a day when the kitchen at the golf course remained closed. After completing a round of golf, Edith sneaked into the kitchen to satisfy her hunger with a secret snack. As she enjoyed her impromptu meal, she decided to wash her plate in the kitchen sink, only to discover that the water supply had been turned off for maintenance. To her surprise, a large wrench was left carelessly placed diagonally across the sink's ledge by none other than Harry Hacker.

Contemplating how to clean her plate without arousing the suspicion of the staff, Edith grasped the hefty wrench in her hand. It was at this moment that the surveyor entered the kitchen to quench his thirst with a bottle of water, as he had been toiling diligently under the scorching sun. Calvin Callaway had assured him that he was welcome to help himself to a beverage at any time. Edith's already frustrated by the waterless kitchen sink, confronted the surveyor about how his work was interfering with her ambition to maintain her club champion status. She sought his attention and recognition for her golfing prowess, but he remained indifferent to her concerns and barely acknowledged her presence.

Edith's pleas became increasingly dramatic as she waved the wrench in her hand, emphasizing her own achievements and abilities and how the demolition of the golf course for a medical center would destroy her prospects for a life time membership—the ultimate award. Despite her passionate outpouring, the surveyor continued to disregard her, which only fueled her frustration further. Unable to bear his dismissive attitude any longer, Edith lashed out in a moment of sheer rage, striking him forcefully over the head with the sizable wrench. The surveyor crumpled to the ground, lifeless.

In the aftermath of this shocking incident, Edith fled the scene, leaving the surveyor's body behind with the wrench lying just feet away on the ground. The next day, the golf course staff discovered his lifeless remains, launching the investigation into the tragic crime.

At first the police suspect Harry Hacker because the large wrench served as the weapon. However, it was during this investigation that a critical piece of evidence came to light. Upon further examination, it was discovered that Edith's plate and the handle of the wrench contained remnants of a peanut butter sandwich. This revelation eliminated Harry Hacker as a suspect since he was severely allergic to peanut butter.

Today, we unveil the truth behind this distressing incident. Edith Eagle, not Harry Hacker, will be held accountable for her actions. The golf course can now move forward, free from the shadow of this terrible crime, but forever marked by the tragedy that unfolded within its serene grounds.

If your verdict listed: Edith Eagle as the Culprit, the Kitchen as the Location, and the Wrench as the Weapon, congratulations on solving our Buried in the Rough Mystery!

Scan Phone to Hear Story Aloud

